Darby Scott Moves to East Mill

September 29, 2014

Designer Darby Scott couldn't escape her New England roots— and didn't want to. After nearly three decades in Manhattan, she now plans to conquer the world from her new headquarters and design studio at East Mill in North Andover. "It's a modern interior where I will be able to stage full runway presentations or display products gallery-style and manage all aspects of the business under one roof," says Scott. The designer is also launching revitalized ready-to-wear and luxury accessories collections. In a style she refers to as "refined tribal," she juxtaposes semiprecious stones against exotic skins and vibrant textiles and incorporates intricate embroidery on her handbags and clothing. Watch for Scott to offer men's accessories and an expanded womenswear collection in 2015.
